Nobody can deal with me,” Kyra announced when she arrived at Intermountain. “You can’t put up with me.” That was her challenge . . . and her cry for help. Kyra was a pretty typical 11-year-old when she came to Intermountain, except that she was prone to disruptive outbursts, was suspicious of the motivations of people and felt that her parents were trying to punish her by seeking help. “I didn’t want to be here,” she admits. “I thought everyone was mean. I thought I didn’t need (to be in treatment) and I was going to get out of here as quickly as possible.”

But Kyra is a brilliant young lady with an outgoing personality and many talents. It wasn’t long before the Intermountain staff was able to gain her trust. For two years she lived on campus working on her relationship skills and learning to use her words to communicate. “I learned that I need people. I can’t do it alone,” she said. “It takes effort. It takes an emotional change.”

Her parents, too, had to make changes. “We had tried to find places (for treatment) ourselves and none of them worked,” they say. “We took out a second mortgage on our home to put her into programs.” Kyra’s parents worried that Intermountain would be just another of many disappointing way stops in their journey. But then they walked off the plane in Helena and into the waiting smiles and hugs of Tina Johnson, Residential Director. “What a great relief!” Kyra’s mother says. “We immediately saw the nurturing and

“If parents and kids need help, then they need Intermountain.”

Betsy Wilcox Shares the Intermountain Story

Intermountain is truly blessed with friends who give generously of their gifts, time, prayers and efforts. Betsy Wilcox is one of these friends.

As a member of the Intermountain Board of Directors, Betsy recently visited campus in celebration of Recognition Day, an event she describes as helpful in deepening her understanding of the valuable work Intermountain does for children.

Following her visit, Betsy was able to share with others what the work of Intermountain means to her.

Betsy’s 10 year old grandson had fallen ill with pneumonia. “It pains me to see my precious grandson in so much pain,” explained Betsy.

“Intermountain works with kids who struggle with emotional pain so great that it is hard for us to even imagine. In many ways, it is harder to bear than physical pain,” said Betsy. “What Intermountain does is help them heal from that pain, just like the doctor helped my grandson with his physical pain. And Intermountain staff are real experts at this kind of healing.”

Betsy Wilcox - and all of you who share our story in your own words - play an integral role in healing our children. Thank you for sharing your passion. We are abundantly blessed.
Hope For Today’s Children, and Tomorrow’s
— by Jim FitzGerald, Chief Executive Officer

There is one thing which gives radiance to everything. It is the idea of something around the corner.
- G. K. Chesterton

We recently celebrated 100 years of healing children and launched Intermountain onto a path of long term financial stability. Having been a part of Intermountain for over thirty years now, I have personally witnessed the generational impact of this work on children and families. I began my tenure here at Intermountain back in the 70’s. Children who were cared for then are now parents of their own children. They have shared with me how the Intermountain experience allowed them to do for their children what their parents before them were not able to do. Their stories are the source of my inspiration, my passion, my hope, and my sense of urgency to stay the course in our quest to secure emotional health and a loving, permanent family for every child.

We have made great strides, but we have much work ahead of us. With that in mind, Intermountain is looking to the future and shaping a plan that will significantly expand and enhance its ability to promote healing through healthy relationships. Our priorities include the following:

Preserve and enhance the quality of Intermountain’s successful programs and services. While Intermountain has diversified its revenue streams, treatment fee reimbursement for indigent children is inadequate to produce desired outcomes. Additional operating support is essential.

Increase our endowment to ensure long-term financial stability and sustained success in producing outcomes and leading positive change for children and families. These resources are made possible because of individuals who have believed in our mission thru the past century. Their support has made it feasible to meet critical needs now and in the future.

Rebuild two residential cottages on the Helena campus to replace the 40-year old existing cottages which have outlived their usefulness. Refurbish and retrofit the existing residential cottages on the residential campus to provide critically needed flexible space for children and staff, temporary campus housing for visiting family members and a chapel.

Build a permanent emergency shelter, the first of its kind in the Flathead Valley, for very young children needing crisis intervention. Intermountain’s Providence Home is currently in its second leased space to provide this critical service, and a permanent, purpose-built facility is urgently needed.

Consolidate and grow community services into one Helena location and add therapists that will wrap prevention and intervention services around each child and family—providing greater access to the full spectrum of child welfare and mental health treatment for traumatized children and their families. This innovative approach for service delivery will serve as a model for better and more efficient response to the needs of vulnerable children.

Launch ChildWise, an initiative that focuses on advocacy, awareness and accelerated learning. Intermountain is dedicated to elevating the wellbeing of vulnerable children as a priority in our communities, draw attention, resources and solutions for children and families and offer quality education opportunities for parents and professionals.

You will hear more about these efforts in the coming year. No doubt, our ability to accomplish more good for our children and families will require a heightened level of public support. For now, I wanted to give you a glimpse at what is around the corner. I also wanted to say thanks to all of you who have invested so generously and have made change possible for generations of children!
Intermountain Centennial Initiative Doubles Membership!

— Ralph Yaeger, Senior Development Officer

During the past year, membership more than doubled in the New Horizons Legacy Society—the group of Intermountain supporters who have established a planned gift, made a bequest or commitment, or provided an outright gift to benefit the Intermountain Donor Restricted Endowment. Many of these legacy gifts were made in response to the Centennial Initiative, an Intermountain effort to expand its permanently endowed resources at the beginning of its second century of service. As a result of these gifts, as well as ones made by founding members of the New Horizons Legacy Society, Intermountain is building a solid foundation that will grow increasingly stronger in perpetuity. Through the Centennial Initiative alone, we know that millions of new dollars will accumulate to the endowment. These gifts that keep on giving offer enduring promises of brighter futures for generations of children to come. Intermountain is deeply grateful to the following individuals for their foresight and generosity.

caring qualities of staff.” Kyra’s parents also shared what impressed them about Intermountain. “We liked the structure, the organization of everything . . . not only the consistency of the same staff that Kyra specifically worked with, but even the staff in other cottages had the same boundaries.”

While Kyra worked with counselors, teachers, and therapists, her parents learned a new way to parent. “You demonstrated how to live in a family. I learned a lot about myself and that I can be a ‘good enough’ mom. I found myself as a human being; that I can forgive the past and find hope for the future.” Kyra’s dad also discovered more about parenting, “I always knew that family comes first. I thought my part of providing for my family was putting my job first, but now I see that relationships with my family are much more important.”

“Grandma didn’t have a lot of instructions,” Gary explained. “But if she told me once, she told me a hundred times: My bears go to Intermountain.”

In some respects, these were two of Vera’s great loves. Nobody had to guess what to get Vera for Christmas because she loved teddy bears. Even after a fire destroyed her home, Vera rebuilt her collection until her bedroom was a veritable bear lodge. Plain bears, fancy bears, girl-bears, boy-bears -- any type of teddy bear: they all found a home with Vera.

Vera’s other great love, of course, was children. She was “Grandma Vera” to everyone from the grown man who came back home for his 30th High School Class reunion (“I had him in Sunday School!” Vera proudly explained) to the restless infant giggling at her in church. Vera belonged to all of us. But she belonged, especially, to the children. She just loved them.

It was natural that her love for children would extend to Intermountain. Having listened intently to Dana describe her work as Intermountain’s chaplain, Vera commented: “What a wonderful ministry! I just wish that I could see it someday!”

One of my life’s blessings was making that wish for Vera come true.

Vera got to visit the Intermountain campus twice. On both occasions, she was overwhelmed by their work in taking broken children and making them whole again. “I can’t think of a more wonderful ministry!” she remarked. That was when she made her decision. My bears go to Intermountain.

Every last one of us misses Vera. Physically small, Vera’s passing has left a gaping hole in all of our hearts. But, having fulfilled one of her final wishes, it makes me feel good knowing that her bears are where she wanted them to be – as part of this ministry, this wonderful ministry of healing broken children.

When I miss Vera especially, I think about her bears in their new home. It makes me feel happy to know that they are where they belong – in this place where they can be loved and bring love and healing through healthy relationships. And Vera’s smile touches me from that place of eternity. And I hear her sweet voice: “What a wonderful ministry! What a wonderful ministry!”

Editor’s note: Because of Vera’s generosity, we are well supplied with stuffed animals. Our current wish list can be found on our website at bb.intermountain.org/wishlist.

A Wonderful Ministry
The Story of Vera, Her Teddy Bears, and Intermountain
– By Rev. Tim Lanham, President’s Council

“My bears go to Intermountain.”

Her grandson’s thoughts converged with mine as we sat by Vera’s bedside waiting for her to cross that threshold separating this life from the life to come. Our shared thoughts and memories percolated about Vera’s long, fruitful life and what needed to be done – now that the end was drawing near.

“Grandma didn’t have a lot of instructions,” Gary explained. “But if she told me once, she told me a hundred times: My bears go to Intermountain.”
